In a baffling episode of The Jerry Springer Show, two women -- who are named on the show -- argue over which human is more beautiful. The dispute -- which seems to involve complex cultural issues -- only gets deeper as the two "women" spar in front of a cheering crowd. But will it really be a Jerry Springer show if something gets so twisted? It turns out, a bit. The two women are named Lillian (on the left) and Sarah, and Sarah is determined to be the more beautiful. But, well, she's just so beautiful. She talks about her hair, her figure, her legs. After all, Lillian is a "black woman." A screenshot of the show: Update: It turns out the women were from Eastern Europe. But still, they should be called Lillian and Sarah. Or, even better, Sarah-Gardena. [Via Red Eye, Bored Panda, JerrySpringerShow.com] Health Canada has sanctioned seven pesticides, mostly herbicides, for sale in stores, said a spokesman for the agency on Tuesday. The pesticides, containing the active ingredients metamitron, cinidon-ethyl, 2,4-D, paraquat, glyphosate, coumaphos, diazinon, and glyphosate tolerant soybeans (Glyt1a), will be available for sale "on an interim basis" starting on July 20, said Ashley Laberge, a spokesman for the federal government's department of Health. Health Canada, in cooperation with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, is seeking comment on its decision. The agency has also released a "fact sheet" outlining the health concerns associated with the use of the seven pesticides.

"Previous efforts to reduce harmful exposures to pesticides used in agriculture have not been effective," the agency said. "Health Canada has determined the risk from these exposures warrants immediate action." Laberge said Health Canada consulted Health Canada's Pest Management Regulatory Agency and its own biological risk assessment division before making its decision.

The seven pesticides have been authorized for sale in Canada since March 2015, and since then the agency has been reviewing the risk with government officials and stakeholders, she
